

G9 MYP Japanese A

In the course, students develop analytical, comprehension, organization, and presentation skills as they explore current, global issues. We will explore and discuss the following topics: positive human relationships, human ingenuity and problems, relationships with nature, and a materially satisfactory life in the world. Students are expected to read literary works at home and prepare to express ideas about the given questions and original insight of the literary works. The main assessments are analytical essays, comparative essays, creative writing, a commentary, research and a presentation.
